WORLDBUILDING WORKBOOK

Build a World From One Idea

Turn one spark into people, places, consequences, stories, and finished products.

A finished digital edition. Print it, mark it up, or use it on screen.

The world test

A living world is not a pile of lore. It contains distinct people, work with consequences, systems that remember, and doors a visitor can enter.

Your one idea

1. The Spark

Write the idea in one sentence.

Why must this world exist?

What feeling should a visitor carry out?

2. The Rule

Name one rule that makes this world different.

Who benefits and who pays?

What breaks when somebody refuses it?

3. The Place

Name the first place people can picture.

What work happens there?

Which sensory detail shows who has power?

4. The People

Create three people who want different outcomes.

Give each a competence, protection, refusal, contradiction, and hope.

Write three lines only each would say.

5. The Work

What keeps the place alive daily?

Who performs invisible labor?

What tool, ritual, or shortcut shows the culture?

6. The Friction

What ordinary problem reveals character?

What does each person misunderstand?

Which choice has a consequence?

7. The Memory

What happened before page one?

Who remembers it differently?

What object or place carries the memory?

8. The System

Map people, places, work, rules, resources, consequence, and repair.

Where does information travel?

What changes elsewhere when one part moves?

9. The First Story

Begin with a person doing work.

Let a specific problem interrupt routine.

End with a changed relationship or decision.

10. The Living Shelf

Choose the first form: story, card, recipe, audio scene, map, or activity.

Define artifact, price, rights, delivery, and support.

Name the next product only after the first is finished.
